A family from another country moved in across the street. They had two girls close to my age. They didn’t know much about Heavenly Father and Jesus Christ. I became friends with them. I noticed that they swore a lot and did other things that weren’t good. Instead of walking away and not being their friend, I told them about Heavenly Father and the gospel, and said they shouldn’t swear or do bad things. I even invited them to church. Ever since then, they have been doing better and not swearing so much. They even started saying prayers at night. I am glad I can be a good missionary.

One time the missionaries in our area gave a lesson in Primary. At the end of the lesson they gave us pass-along cards and invited us to give them to our friends. At school the next day I gave the cards to four of my friends. I was a little nervous, but afterward I felt really good. I was excited to spread the gospel! I know I don’t have to wait to go on a mission to be a good missionary!

Heart Wreath

large paper plate, colored paper, scissors, glue

You can make this craft by yourself, or your family could do it together. Cut a circle out of the inside of the plate, leaving two inches around the edge of the plate. Cut hearts out of the colored paper. You will need enough to go around the whole edge of the plate. On each heart, write something nice about a member of your family. When you have written something on all the hearts, glue them around the plate. Hang your wreath where your family can see it this month.

Journal Junction

My grandma gave me a gospel journal when I was baptized. Whenever I write in it, I think about how many things Jesus does for us and how we should do more for Him. So every time I write in my journal I pray before and after to thank Heavenly Father.
