Buzz, buzz.

Tyler sprawled on top of the jungle gym in his backyard, watching a fuzzy bee zip around and between the bars. "You won't find any nectar here," he said to the bee. "Go look somewhere else."

A gust of wind blew through the yard, spinning the bee away. Tyler sat up. It was getting really windy. He looked over at the apricot tree his brothers Brad and Adam were playing under. Its branches were blowing straight back, like a giant brush was combing through its leaves.

"Tyler, get off the jungle gym," a voice inside Tyler said. It wasn't loud, but it was calm and sure. Tyler knew it was the right thing to do.

Tyler climbed down. Sitting beside his brothers under the apricot tree, he looked out at the backyard as the wind grew stronger.

Just then a tall tree on the side of the yard began creaking in the wind.

Tyler and his brothers watched as a powerful gust of wind hit the yard. With a loud crack! the tall tree crashed down directly in front of them. It smashed into the jungle gym Tyler had been lying on, bending it in half.

Tyler and his brothers stared at the fallen tree, their eyes wide.

Tyler shakily lifted his hand to touch a branch of the tree. It had fallen only a few inches from his nose. His hands shook, and his insides felt all jiggly-wiggly.

"Wow," Brad said, his voice quiet. "You could have been smushed."

Adam's mouth hung open like a big letter O.

The three boys walked around the fallen tree, staring at the giant branches and back, like a giant brush was combing through its leaves.

My cousin Bransyn and I were riding skateboards down the driveway. Suddenly I heard someone say, “Stop!” I stopped. My cousin stopped too. She asked me if I said stop, and I said no. She hadn’t said it either. We looked around and didn’t see anyone else. Then suddenly a car came speeding down the road in front of where we had been playing. I knew it was the Holy Ghost that had warned us of danger. It is good to know that I have the gift of the Holy Ghost.
