

Dew

By Hannah Winward

Water gathers in the night
Collecting droplets
On dark tangled blades
Huge spheres of glass
That magnify minute shards of light
And when the sun whispers its warmth
Upon crystal surfaces
They open their arms
And return to the sky.