

The Golden Plates

by Margaret C. Richards and Carol C. Madsen/Illustrated by Howard Post

The song "The Golden Plates" will have special meaning for you when you think about the story it tells. It might be fun for your family to play this game and then sing the song together during a family home evening.

Rose Thomas Graham

J. Spencer Cornwall
Arr. Margaret C. Richards

1. The gold - en plates lay hid - den Deep in a moun - tain side. Un -
2. A rec - ord made by Ne - phi. A god - ly man of old. Now,

The first system of musical notation is in 4/4 time. It consists of a treble and bass staff. The melody is in the treble staff, and the bass staff provides a simple accompaniment. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.

til God found one faith - ful, In whom He could con - fide.
in the Book of Mor - mon, The sto - ry is re - told.

The second system of musical notation continues the melody and accompaniment from the first system. It also consists of a treble and bass staff. The lyrics are written below the treble staff.