

Remembering a

Special Day

My name is

Allison S.,

and I live in Nashville, Tennessee. I am eight years old, and I was just baptized a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Some of my family members came to my baptism. My little sister, Abigail, and my brother, Daniel, were there. My grandparents came all the way from Utah. My mom helped me get dressed, and my dad baptized me. I was baptized in the same dress that my mom wore when she got baptized when she was a little girl.

I invited some of my friends to come to my baptism too. Some of them were from school and some were from Girl Scouts. None of them are members of the Church, but I knew they would want to be there on my special day.

All of my friends believe in the Bible, so we have that in common. I asked them to write down their favorite Bible verses and bring them to my baptism. After my baptism, I underlined the verses in my own Bible and wrote my friends' names in the margins. My friend Katie gave me Proverbs 17:17, which says, "A friend loveth at all times." Another friend, Molly, brought Romans 8:28. It says, "All things work together for good to them that love God."
